FOR THE WESTERN DISTRICT OF MICHIGAN
NORTHERN DIVISION

WILLIE MCGRAW,

Plaintiff,

v.

Case No. 2:06-cv-200
HON. R. ALLAN EDGAR

GERALD RILEY, et al.,

Defendants.

REPORT AND RECOMMENDATION

Plaintiff Willie James McGraw, a prisoner confined at the Alger Maximum Correctional Facility, filed this pro se civil rights action pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1983. Plaintiff has sued Gerald Riley, the prison Chaplain; Gerald Anderson, Assistant Food Service Director; and David Burnett, Special Activities Coordinator at the Michigan Department of Corrections (MDOC). Defendants are being sued in their personal capacities. Plaintiff seeks injunctive relief and $90,000 from each defendant.

In March of 2000, Plaintiff changed his religious preference to Judaism. Plaintiff made multiple requests to be placed on a Kosher diet and filed numerous grievances that were all denied. Subsequently, Plaintiff attempted to practice his faith on his own. Plaintiff was given a minor misconduct ticket, placed on food loaf, and received 15 days loss of privileges after uneaten food was discovered in his cell.

Plaintiff was denied placement on the Kosher Meal Program because he repeatedly failed to pass the interview which determines whether a Kosher diet is part of a sincerely held religious belief. Michigan Department of Corrections Operating Procedure 05.05.03.150-A provides:

K. A prisoner who wants to participate in the Kosher Meal Program must submit a written request to the Warden or designee for approval. The request shall include a statement as to his/her religious beliefs which necessitate a Kosher diet.

L. Upon receipt of such a request, the Warden shall verify that the prisoner is eligible to participate in the Kosher Meal Program based on the prisoner's designated religion by requiring the Assistant Deputy Warden for Programs or the chaplain to interview the prisoner and obtain a response to the following questions:

1. Briefly explain the major teachings of your designated religion.
2. Why is a kosher diet required by this religion?
3. What is a kosher diet? In other words, how does it differ from food otherwise provided by the institution? What types of food are not allowed?

Defendants maintain that Plaintiff's answers evince the most rudimentary knowledge of Judaism and clearly indicate a lack of sincerity in his religious beliefs.

Plaintiff's complaint alleges that the denial of Kosher meals violates his First, Eighth, and Fourteenth Amendment rights. He maintains that the Defendants denied him of his fundamental right to free exercise of religion by denying his request for a Kosher diet. Plaintiff further alleges that there are no Jewish books available to him.

Defendants counter that MDOC's policy of restricting the Kosher Diet Program to prisoners whose sincerity is evidenced by their basic knowledge of their religion and the requirements of keeping Kosher is constitutionally legitimate. Defendants also maintain that there are several Jewish books available in the prison library. Additionally, Defendants claim that Plaintiff's case should be dismissed because it is substantially similar to another case brought by Plaintiff and dismissed on summary judgment.

Presently before the Court is Defendants Motion for Summary Judgment filed pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 56. Plaintiff has filed a response in opposition, and the matter is ready for decision. Summary judgment is appropriate only if the moving party establishes that there is no genuine issue of material fact for trial and that he is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c); Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 322-323 (1986). If the movant carries the burden of showing there is an absence of evidence to support a claim or defense, then the party opposing the motion must demonstrate by affidavits, depositions, answers to interrogatories, and admissions on file, that there is a genuine issue of material fact for trial. Id. at 324-25. The nonmoving party cannot rest on its pleadings but must present "specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue for trial." Id. at 324 (quoting Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(e)).

The evidence must be viewed in the light most favorable to the nonmoving party. Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 251-52 (1986). Thus, any direct evidence offered by the plaintiff in response to a summary judgment motion must be accepted as true. Muhammad v. Close, 379 F.3d 413, 416 (6th Cir. 2004) (citing Adams v. Metiva, 31 F.3d 375, 382 (6th Cir. 1994)). However, a mere scintilla of evidence in support of the nonmovant's position will be insufficient. Anderson, 477 U.S. at 251-52. Ultimately, the court must determine whether there is sufficient "evidence on which the jury could reasonably find for the plaintiff." Id. at 252. See also Leahy v. Trans Jones, Inc., 996 F.2d 136, 139 (6th Cir. 1993) (single affidavit, in presence of other evidence to the contrary, failed to present genuine issue of fact); cf. Moore, Owen, Thomas & Co. v. Coffey, 992 F.2d 1439, 1448 (6th Cir. 1993) (single affidavit concerning state of mind created factual issue).

Defendants claim they are entitled to summary judgment on Plaintiff's claim that the denial of a Kosher diet violated his First Amendment right to freely exercise his religious beliefs. Prisoners do not lose their right to freely exercise their religion by virtue of their incarceration. Cruz v. Beto, 405 U.S. 319, 322, n. 2 (1972). Freedom of religion being a fundamental right, any regulation which infringes upon it must generally be justified by a "compelling state interest." See, for example, Wisconsin v. Yoder, 406 U.S. 205 (1972). However, as a prisoner, Plaintiff's constitutional rights are subject to severe restriction. See, for example, Bell v. Wolfish, 441 U.S. 520 (1979) (restriction on receipt of reading materials); Hudson v. Palmer, 468 U.S. 517 (1984) (privacy); Wolff v. McDonnell, 418 U.S. 539, 566 (1974) (right to call witnesses); Richardson v. Ramirez, 418 U.S. 24 (1974) (vote). See, generally, Washington v. Harper, 494 U.S. 210 (1990); Turner v. Safley, 482 U.S. 78 (1987); O'Lone v. Estate of Shabazz, 482 U.S. 342 (1987).

Rather, the standard by which prison regulations impinging on prisoner constitutional rights is judged is "reasonableness." Turner, 482 U.S. at 88-95; Washington, 494 U.S. at 223-25. In Turner, the Supreme Court expressly rejected any degree of "heightened scrutiny" in order to assure that "prison administrators . . . and not the courts . . . make the difficult judgments concerning institutional operations." Id. at 89, quoting Jones v. North Carolina Prisoners' Union, 433 U.S. 119 (1977).

In Turner, the court set forth four factors "relevant in determining the reasonableness of the regulation at issue." 482 U.S. at 89-91. First, there must be a "valid, rational connection" between the prison regulation and the legitimate governmental interest put forward to justify it. Id. at 89, quoting Block v. Rutherford, 468 U.S. 576, 586 (1984). Second, the reasonableness of a restriction takes into account whether there are "alternative means of exercising the right that remain open to the prison inmate." Turner, 482 U.S. at 90. Third, the court should consider the "impact accommodation of the asserted constitutional right will have on guards and other inmates, and on the allocation of prison resources generally.” Turner, 482 U.S. at 90. Finally, the existence or absence of ready alternatives of accommodating the prisoner’s rights is relevant to reasonableness. Turner, 482 U.S. at 90. As stated by the court, this final factor “is not a ‘least restrictive alternative’ test.” Id. at 90. “Prison officials need not show that “no reasonable method exists by which [prisoners’] rights can be accommodated without creating bona fide [prison] problems.” O’Lone v. Estate of Shabazz, 482 U.S. 342, 350 (1987).

In determining whether a prisoner’s particular religious beliefs are entitled to free exercise protection, the relevant inquiry is not whether, as an objective matter, the belief is “accurate or logical.” Jolly v. Coughlin, 76 F.3d 468, 476 (2d Cir.1996). Instead, the inquiry is “whether the beliefs professed by a [claimant] are sincerely held and whether they are, in his own scheme of things, religious.” Patrick [v. LeFevre], 745 F.2d at 157 (quoting United States v. Seeger, 380 U.S. 163, 185, 85 S.Ct. 850, 13 L. Ed.2d 733 (1965)) (alteration in original) (emphasis added). A claimant need not be a member of a particular organized religious denomination to show sincerity of belief. See Frazee v. Illinois Dep’t of Employment Sec., 489 U.S. 829, 834, 109 S.Ct. 1514, 103 L. Ed.2d 914 (1989).

Jackson v. Mann, 196 F.3d 316, 320 (2d Cir. 1999).

In Jackson v. Mann, the Second Circuit held that the district court erred in substituting the objective “accuracy” of the Plaintiff’s assertion that he was Jewish for the correct test – whether the Plaintiff’s beliefs were sincerely held. 196 F.3d at 320. The pertinent issue in Jackson, as in this case, was whether the plaintiff was entitled to receive a Kosher diet. Id. at 318. The Second Circuit concluded that the defendants in Jackson v. Mann were not entitled to summary judgment because even if the plaintiff was not Jewish according to Judaic law, this did not resolve the issue of material fact regarding the sincerity of the plaintiff’s religious beliefs. Id. at 320-21.

Similarly, in Mosier v. Maynard, 937 F.2d 1521 (10th Cir. 1991), the Tenth Circuit held that merely because the plaintiff was not a member of the Cherokee nation or the Native American worship group at his prison, it did not mean that his belief was insincere. Id. at 1523.¹ As noted by the Tenth Circuit in *Mosier*², the United States Supreme Court has rejected the idea that membership in a religious organization is a prerequisite for religious convictions to be judged sincere. Frazee v. Illinois Dep’t of Employment Sec., 489 U.S. 829, 834, 109 S.Ct. 1514, 1517-18 (1989).

In support of their motion for summary judgment, Defendants assert that because Kosher food preparation requires special equipment and training, not every MDOC facility offers a Kosher diet. As a result, many prisoners use a religious diet request as a means of transferring to a facility of their choice. In order to avoid manipulation of this sort, the MDOC limits a Kosher diet to those prisoners whose sincere religious belief requires them to eat only Kosher foods. Defendants assert that this protects the MDOC’s interest in maintaining security and order in the operation of MDOC facilities.

In this case, Plaintiff is not entitled to a Kosher diet, because he does not pass the test of having sincerely held religious beliefs. When asked to explain the major teachings of Judaism, Plaintiff answered: “Oral law of Moses.” When asked why he needed Kosher meals, Plaintiff responded, “Cause it is 80% of the Judaic religion” and when Plaintiff was asked what foods are not allowed in a Kosher diet, he replied, “Shell fish and fish that doesn’t have fins and scales.” According to Defendants, Plaintiff’s responses to the Chaplain’s interview questions clearly reveal a limited knowledge of Judaism and its dietary requirements. Further, Defendants explain that Plaintiff's lack of knowledge about what foods are Kosher and why food must be Kosher strongly indicate a lack of sincerity in his beliefs. Plaintiff has failed to rebut Defendants' analysis of Plaintiff's answers.

¹The plaintiff in Mosier was seeking an exemption from the prison’s requirement that hair be kept to a certain length.

²See Mosier, 937 F.2d at 1523.

Defendants have the right to ensure that each prisoner is sincere in his belief before allowing him access to the Kosher Meal Program. The use of MDOC Operating Procedure 05.03.150-A is a legitimate means of determining whether a prisoner is entitled to the Kosher menu. In the opinion of the undersigned, Plaintiff has not succeeded in demonstrating the existence of a genuine issue of material fact as to whether Plaintiff is sincere in his religious beliefs regarding the need for a Kosher diet. Therefore, Defendants are entitled to summary judgment on Plaintiff's claims.

In the opinion of the undersigned, Defendant Anderson is entitled to summary judgment for lack of personal involvement. Liability under Section 1983 must be based on more than merely the right to control employees. Polk Co. v. Dodson, 454 U.S. 312, 325-26 (1981); Monell v. New York City Department of Social Services, 436 U.S. 658 (1978). Thus, Section 1983 liability cannot be premised upon mere allegations of respondeat superior. Monell, 436 U.S. at 691; Polk, 454 U.S. at 325. A party cannot be held liable under Section 1983 absent a showing that the party personally participated in, or otherwise authorized, approved or knowingly acquiesced in, the allegedly unconstitutional conduct. See e.g. Leach v. Shelby Co. Sheriff, 891 F.2d 1241, 1246 (6th Cir. 1989), cert. denied, 495 U.S. 932 (1990); Hays v. Jefferson, 668 F.2d 869, 874 (6th Cir.), cert. denied, 459 U.S. 833 (1982). See also Bellamy v. Bradley, 729 F.2d 416, 421 (6th Cir.), cert. denied 469 U.S. 845 (1984).

Supervisory officials can be held liable for the acts of their subordinates only if plaintiff establishes that the supervisor failed to appropriately discharge his supervisory duties, and that this failure resulted in a denial or deprivation of plaintiff's federal rights. See e.g. Leach, 891 F.2d at 1246; Hayes v. Vessey, 777 F.2d 1149, 1154 (6th Cir. 1985). However, the failure of a supervisor to supervise, control or train the offending employee is not actionable absent a showing that the official implicitly encouraged, authorized, approved or knowingly acquiesced in, or in some other way directly participated in, the offensive conduct. Leach, 891 F.2d at 1246. Such a claim requires, at a minimum, that the official had knowledge of the offending employee's conduct at a time when the conduct could be prevented, or that such conduct was otherwise foreseeable or predictable. See e.g. Gibson v. Foltz, 963 F.2d 851, 854 (6th Cir. 1992). In addition, plaintiff must show that defendant had some duty or authority to act. See e.g. Birrell v. Brown, 867 F.2d 956, 959 (6th Cir. 1989) (lower level official not liable for shortcomings of building); Ghandi v. Police Dept. of City of Detroit, 747 F.2d 338, 351 (6th Cir. 1984) (mere presence at the scene is insufficient grounds to impose Section 1983 liability in the absence of a duty to act); accord Hall v. Shipley, 932 F.2d 1147 (6th Cir. 1991). In addition, merely bringing a problem to the attention of a supervisory official is not sufficient to impose such liability. See Shelly v. Johnson, 684 F. Supp. 941, 946 (W.D. Mich. 1987) (Hillman, C.J.), aff'd 849 F.2d 228 (6th Cir. 1988). Finally, supervisory liability claims cannot be based on simple negligence. Leach, 891 F.2d at 1246; Weaver v. Toombs, 756 F. Supp. 335, 337 (W.D. Mich. 1989), aff'd 915 F.2d 1574 (6th Cir. 1990).

As an assistant food service supervisor, Defendant Anderson lacked authority to set policy regarding Kosher diets and to approve an individual inmate for Kosher diet. Furthermore, Plaintiff has not alleged facts establishing that Defendant Anderson was personally involved in the activity which forms the basis of his claim. Accordingly, the Court concludes that Plaintiff's claims against Defendant Anderson are properly dismissed for lack of personal involvement.

Alternatively, Defendants move for qualified immunity. Government officials, performing discretionary functions, generally are shielded from liability for civil damages insofar as their conduct does not violate clearly established statutory or constitutional rights of which a reasonable person would have known. Dietrich v. Burrows, 167 F.3d 1007, 1012 (6th Cir. 1999); Turner v. Scott, 119 F.3d 425, 429 (6th Cir. 1997); Noble v. Schmitt, 87 F.3d 157, 160 (6th Cir. 1996); Harlow v. Fitzgerald, 457 U.S. 800, 818 (1982). An "objective reasonableness" test is used to determine whether the official could reasonably have believed his conduct was lawful. Dietrich, 167 F.3d at 1012; Anderson v. Creighton, 483 U.S. 635, 641 (1987).

The procedure for evaluating claims of qualified immunity is tripartite: First, we determine whether a constitutional violation occurred; second, we determine whether the right that was violated was a clearly established right of which a reasonable person would have known; finally, we determine whether the plaintiff has alleged sufficient facts, and supported the allegations by sufficient evidence, to indicate that what the official allegedly did was objectively unreasonable in light of the clearly established constitutional rights. Williams v. Mehra, 186 F.3d 685, 690 (6th Cir. 1999).

When determining whether a right is clearly established, this court must look first to decisions of the United States Supreme Court, then to decisions of the Sixth Circuit and to other courts within this Circuit, and finally to decisions of other circuits. Dietrich, 167 F.3d at 1012. An official action is not necessarily protected by qualified immunity merely because the very action in question has not previously been held to be unlawful. Rather, in light of pre-existing law, the unlawfulness of the official's conduct must be apparent. Dietrich, 167 F.3d at 1012; Wegener v. City of Covington, 933 F.2d 390, 392 (6th Cir. 1991).

When making a qualified immunity analysis, the facts must be interpreted in the light most favorable to the plaintiff. Part of the analysis is to determine whether there are any genuinely disputed questions of material fact. Kain v. Nesbitt, 156 F.3d 669, 672 (6th Cir. 1998). Where there is a genuinely disputed question of fact, it is for the trier of fact to resolve, not the judge. "This would be true notwithstanding that the trial judge found the [defendant] officer to be more credible than the plaintiff because it is not for the court to make credibility determinations at this stage of the proceeding." Id.

The operation of the qualified immunity standard depends substantially upon the level of generality at which the relevant legal rule is to be identified.

The contours of the right must be sufficiently clear that a reasonable official would understand that what he is doing violates that right. This is not to say that an official action is protected by qualified immunity unless the very action in question has previously been held unlawful, but it is to say that in the light of the pre-existing law the unlawfulness must be apparent.

Anderson, 483 U.S. at 639-40. See also Durham v. Nu 'Man, 97 F.3d 862, 866 (6th Cir. 1996), cert. denied, 520 U.S. 1157 (1997).

The Sixth Circuit has observed:

A right is not considered clearly established unless it has been authoritatively decided by the United States Supreme Court, the Court of Appeals, or the highest court of the state in which the alleged constitutional violation occurred.

Durham, 97 F.3d at 866 (citing Robinson v. Bibb, 840 F.2d 349, 351 (6th Cir. 1988)).

Thus, qualified immunity is not triggered only where the very action in question was previously held unlawful. Anderson, 483 U.S. at 639-40. Rather, the test is whether the contours of the right were sufficiently clear that a reasonable official would understand that what he is doing violated plaintiff's federal rights. Id.

Furthermore, a defendant need not actively participate in unlawful conduct in order to be liable under Section 1983. Rather, a defendant may be liable where he has a duty to protect a plaintiff and fails to comply with this duty. Durham, 97 F.3d at 866-868 (holding that a nurse and a security guard at a state hospital may be liable under Section 1983 where they do not take action to prevent a patient from being beaten). See also McHenry v. Chadwick, 896 F.2d 184 (6th Cir. 1990)(a correctional officer who observes an unlawful beating may be liable under Section 1983 even though he did not actively participate in the beating), and Bruner v. Dunaway, 684 F.2d 422 (6th Cir. 1982), cert. denied sub nom, Bates v. Bruner, 459 U.S. 1171 (1983)(police officers who stood by and observed an unlawful beating by fellow officers could be held liable under Section 1983).

When faced with a qualified immunity defense, the court must first determine whether or not the plaintiff has stated a claim upon which relief can be granted. Siegert v. Gilley, 500 U.S. 226, 232 (1991); Turner, 119 F.3d at 429. If the court answers that question in the affirmative, the court goes on to determine whether or not the right allegedly violated was clearly established. Turner, 119 F.3d 425. These are both purely legal questions. The immunity issue should not be resolved if there are factual disputes on which the issue of immunity turns such that it cannot be determined before trial whether the defendants' conduct violated clearly established rights. Hall v. Shipley, 932 F.2d 1147, 1154 (6th Cir. 1991).

In this case, Plaintiff has failed to meet his burden of showing that the Defendants violated any clearly established law or that any official in Defendants' positions would have clearly understood that he was under an affirmative duty to refrain from such conduct. In the opinion of the undersigned, Defendants in this matter have acted reasonably and should be granted qualified immunity.

Accordingly, in the opinion of the undersigned, Plaintiff has failed to sustain his burden of proof in response to Defendants' Motion for Summary Judgment. Accordingly, it is recommended that Defendants' Motion for Summary Judgment (Docket #24) be granted and this case be dismissed in its entirety. Additionally, it is recommended that Plaintiff's Motion to Strike (Docket #37) be denied.

Further, if the court adopts this recommendation the court should decide that an appeal of this action would not be in good faith within the meaning of 28 U.S.C. § 1915(a)(3). See McGore v. Wrigglesworth, 114 F.3d 601, 611 (6th Cir. 1997). For the same reasons that the court grants defendants' motion for summary judgment, the court can discern no good-faith basis for an appeal. It is recommended that should the plaintiff appeal this decision, the court assess the $455 appellate filing fee pursuant to § 1915(b)(1), see McGore, 114 F.3d at 610-11, unless plaintiff is barred from proceeding in forma pauperis, e.g., by the "three-strikes" rule of § 1915(g). If he is barred, he should be required to pay the $455 appellate filing fee in one lump sum.

NOTICE TO PARTIES: Objections to this Report and Recommendation must be served on opposing parties and filed with the Clerk of the Court within ten (10) days of receipt of this Report and Recommendation. 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1)(C); Fed. R. Civ. P. 72(b); W.D. Mich. LCivR 72.3(b). Failure to file timely objections constitutes a waiver of any further right to appeal. United States v. Walters, 638 F.2d 947 (6th Cir. 1981). See also Thomas v. Arn, 474 U.S. 140 (1985).
